Mariánské Lázně, the youngest of the West Bohemia spa towns, is distinguished by its lovely surroundings. The valley in which the town lies opens up towards the south and is protected by forested hills on the other sides. At an elevation of 630 metres above sea level, clean air, carefully manicured parks, forests surrounding the spa, specific architecture and eventful cultural, sports and social life all make up the unique character of Mariánské Lázně. As early as at the beginning of the 19th century, Mariánské Lázně became a world-famous and much frequented spa location. Among the prominent visitors, there were Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, Fryderyk Chopin and the English King Edward VII.
